Morning Tea

Please think about bringing your own mug for m/tea – this not only helps with the environment but also keeps our costs to a minimum. A mug with a lid would work best, as this would alleviate spillage and a possible injury. If you do use a disposable cup, please make sure you put it in the bin before you leave. We have had a lot of spills while packing up when cups are left on the floor.

Next meeting – Tuesday June 15 - venue to be confirmed.

President's Message

As we approach winter and the days are getting shorter, it is hard to find the time to do everything in the garden that needs to be done. The upside is that the days are beautiful with stunning sunrises and sunsets. And the district's gardens are beautiful at present with myriad camellias, hibiscus, and tibouchinas, and the roses go on and on, flaunting their beauty month after month. The bright orange of mandarins and oranges against the glossy green leaves of the citrus trees are equally beautiful, and I can attest to the delicious, fresh taste.

On a beautiful Thursday morning a week or so ago, Max Atkins hosted a rose information session in his garden. As most of our members are aware Max dominates most classes in the Rose competition at the Milton Show every year. Even in 2020 after his house and extensive rose garden were burnt to the ground in the Currowan fire, Max managed to successfully show his roses, that, in the short eight weeks since the fire, had recovered sufficiently to produce prize winning flowers. Max generously shared the knowledge and hints that he has accumulated over the years. I am sure everyone present learnt something new to help them understand how to grow healthier and lovelier roses. I certainly did. For newcomers to rose growing it was a great opportunity to learn the full story from an expert. I know everyone enjoyed exploring Max's lovely garden and its stunning roses. We also had a lovely Morning Tea at Vicki Weir's house next door. Many thanks to Max and Val Atkins and to Vicki for welcoming us to their homes and to the members who provided the delicious treats for Morning Tea. It was a very special morning.

I am hoping that Max will invite us back in July to give us a rose pruning demonstration.

On 29 May the Bowral Garden Club is visiting this area. The visitors will start with Morning Tea at my garden in Croobyar and follow that with a visit to Robyn and Bill Whitby's amazing bonsai display and thence to Daryl Bishop's Garden. I hope they enjoy their visit. Hopefully, we can have a return visit to Bowral in the future

The Milton Show Society is currently looking for Stewards for the 2022 Show. I have been a steward in the Jams and Jellies section for a few years now. The job involves displaying the exhibits and assisting the judge on the day before the Show opens, to select the winners in each class. We open and hand the judge each jar of jam which she tastes and decides which are the three winners. We record all the winners and note any comments that the judge wants to pass onto the exhibitor. After the Show we return all the jars to the exhibitors. I have worked with great people and learnt a lot about making better jam. I can strongly recommend becoming a Steward at the Show. It is fun. If you are interested let me know

Our newsletter Editor, Ann, is very keen to get your contributions to The Garden Thymes. We all loved reading members' stories and vignettes throughout 2020 in the Covid period. Your stories make the Newsletter special and a joy to read so please keep those stories and photos coming. Send your contribution to ulladullagardenclub@gmail.com or talk to Ann about submitting a written story on actual paper.

We also need your clever gardening hints for the Shirley Smith Award. If you have a tried-and-true hint or advice that you have found successful in your garden, write it down and give it to Ann or send it to ulladullagardenclub@gmail.com. It is sure to help someone else with their gardening and it could win you the Shirley Smith Award. In November, members vote on which hint that has been published in the newsletter, they think is best. The hint with the biggest number of votes receives the Shirley Smith Award. Not only do you have the prestige associated with this Award, but you also get your name engraved on the trophy and you get a bundle of garden goodies. So, get those hints rolling in.

Happy winter gardening!

To control codling moths in fruit trees, hang a couple of opened necked jars filled with sweet sherry in your apple, pear persimmon etc. trees around late September. This will attract the moths and they will die happily in the sherry before laying any eggs near your fruit . Change the sherry on a regular basis for best results.

Morris Holmes horticultural consultant gardener.

Codling moths lay their eggs on leaves on developing fruit as flowering finishes. When the eggs hatch the caterpillars burrow into the fruit. Apply Success Ultra from early flowering onwards and destroy any affected fruit. Trap migrating caterpillars in corrugated cardboard bands wrapped around the tree trunk. About the fauna in my garden – Daryl Bishop

Rainbow Lorikeets

This is a bad time in my garden. The virus which has decimated the flock that normally considers my garden as part of its territory, has taken its toll. This is a flock of 30-40 birds; they have visiting rights covering their morning and afternoon treats (not a meal) as I feel they need to forage for themselves but enough to bring them to my garden each day. If the treat is late, they line up on the deck railing until I appear. These birds are very gregarious, so the virus passes through the flock very quickly; the flock grows smaller by the day. At this morning's count, it was down to 12. I feel very sad as this is not just a local virus.

Although classed as nectar eaters, they can be very destructive as they also like the taste of the petals of some flowers. For example, they shredded my whole display of calla lilies, sitting there calmly chewing on the large petals, having already torn the flowers apart in their eagerness to get at them.

They are also seed eaters; sunflower seeds seem to be their favourite. However, they are not picky and will give most seeds a 'try'. I have even seen them on lawns busily foraging for the grass seed.

They also love fruit; I put a sliced apple out each day, and it doesn't last long.

There about 55 species of lorikeets spread widely in the southern hemisphere; seven of these can be found in Australia. Our local species is the Rainbow Lorikeet which has thick glossy plumage of green, purple, yellow and red. Males and females are similar in both size and colour. The immature birds are a bit duller in colour than the adults.

They usually have only one chick and they nest usually in tree hollows. The young stay with the parents wherever they go until mature enough to fend for themselves and are then accepted into the flock whatever their sex.

The lorikeets are known as brush-tongues. They differ from wattle birds (which have long stiff bristles at the end of their tongue) in that the visible part of the tongue is covered in short bristles or hairs which allow them to really clean a plate/drink if it held something it liked. Despite what some people say, they don't care if the nectar is indigenous or exotic – if your garden provides the nectar, they will be there!

They are beautiful, ravenous, greedy, gregarious, belligerent, charming and friendly. They are fun to have around but need to be kept in their place. They hate to be left out. They have twice chewed holes in my screen door in an effort to get into my house - having worked out that this is where the treats come from. Unlike the magpies, they haven't yet learnt how to open the screen door. Because they like to hang out in flocks, they can be very noisy, but my garden would seem empty without them.

The currawongs are back. There are normally only 2 but this year there are 6 – another change.

The domestic mouse (mus) which I talked about last month, is really making its name (in a bad way). Their plague numbers have reached hundreds of thousands and the damage they are doing is horrendous. This too will pass but farmers, following the fires, floods and COVID must be wondering “what’s next”.

The bandicoots are also back busily digging holes in my lawn each night. They must be going to other people’s lawns as well, so as they are favoured tick carriers, we should be very wary.

I have been particularly pleased during the past 2 weeks to be visited on a regular basis by a wag-tail. He is not at all shy and comes up onto the deck whenever he sees me there.

I hope he stays!

Our Guest Speaker for the April Meeting was Joanne Collins, Physiotherapist at Milton Hospital, who gave an informative talk on how we can maintain our fitness for gardening and how to prevent falls in the garden.

Joanne left the club with a copy “Staying Power” tips and tools to keep you on your feet.

Here is an excerpt from that publication:

Coming to grips with falls

Having a fall gives anyone a shock. Falls can affect us all, no matter what age or level of fitness. They are not an inevitable consequence of growing older – you can do a lot to reduce your own risk of falling. It is simply a matter of employing a new way of thinking about a very old problem.

The causes and cures of falls

As you get older, many changes can happen gradually so that you tend not to notice them. You can become less active, your bones become more brittle, our muscles weaker, our balance less stable and your eyesight less clear. It happens so slowly over several years that it is hard to identify exactly what these changes are.

Please see the editor if you would like to borrow this publication - it has great tips and tricks to keep us safe as we age.

Diary of a thwarted orchid lover

Hitherto I have never been inspired to grow orchids. As a child I would seek out the little native nodding greenhoods in the paddocks at the back of my childhood home, and my mother always had pots of Cymbidium orchids scattered throughout the garden and on her back deck. I was astonished when I learned that my brother was growing orchids in his garden; I think we all know that brothers do not follow such gentle pursuits. And then a few years ago I visited a garden on the road to Bendalong with the Garden Club. It was a beautiful garden. I hope it is still there. The feature that really struck me was the Sydney rock orchids tumbling over rocks at the top of a water feature. And on one of my regular visits to the Milton Rural Landcare Nursery I was struck by the stunning yellow orchids flowering in the gardens bordering the entry path. I decided I must grow Sydney Rock orchids.

So, I went online and ordered the plants. I also ordered a book that purportedly would provide me with all the information I needed to successfully grow Dendrobium speciosum. I closely followed all the instructions, my brown thumb marking each page as I studied and implemented the wise words. But to no avail.

After listening to our own orchid expert, Gary, at a Garden Club meeting, I moved the pot containing my orchid to an easterly aspect only to have the leaves go spotty brown and ultimately shred. So, as a last resort, I planted it in the ground. It did not last long, and I sadly farewelled my Sydney rock orchid.

But I was obviously not ready to give up. On the Garden Club visit down South last month, I was enticed by a fellow traveller to go to the Orchid nursery at Mogo. I bought another orchid. This time it is a hybrid and its label said 'very hardy'. The vendor congratulated me on my choice and provided me with advice that I hope will help overcome my very dark brown thumb.

I have followed the advice to the letter and when Spring has sprung, I will discover whether I should pursue this orchid strewn pathway.

I will let you know what happens.

How sweet it is ... thank you Marie O'Connell

After purchasing 3 organic sweet potato plants my daughter Shelley planted them in her plot at the Murramarang Community Garden; the result is many kilos of large, sweet potatoes.

This is her first effort after purchasing a plot at the garden this year, so along with salad vegetables and a few flowering plants to encourage the local bees you can imagine how keen she now is to plant potatoes for the coming season!

Happy gardening!

Rose Information Morning

Max Atkins conducted a Rose Information Seminar at his home in Milton, on Thursday 20 May, for a small group of members keen to learn more about roses and their care. It was very informative and appreciated by those present. Max provided good detail on the history of roses, use of fertilisers and the management of pests. Many thanks Max.

The lovely morning was topped off by the generosity of Vicki Weir, Max's neighbour, who opened her lovely home and hosted morning tea for those present. Thanks also to Ann Keegan and Chris Turner for their morning tea contributions and help on the day.

Milton Show Ladies Auxiliary

The Milton Show Society's Ladies Auxiliary is keen to hear from anyone who may be interested in joining us to help keep our local show simply the best! I know that there are quite a few Garden Club members who are already involved in the show as competitors and stewards. The Ladies Auxiliary help fund prize money at the show by fundraising events during the year, run the pavilion during the show, and generally help wherever and whenever we are needed. Our next meeting will be on Wed 16th June at 5.30pm. We meet in the Showground office (green building near the entry gate) at the showground.
